SIRIMAHANNOP

Sirimahannop is an exciting dining and event venue on the Chao Phraya River that transports you back to a rich bygone era of Thai trade and heritage. A popular lifestyle destination, this vessel lets you experience the special vibe of Bangkok's "River of Kings" while discovering a unique selection of mixology and gastronomy in a sophisticated ambiance.

HISTORY

Sirimahannop is a replica of a Royal Thai navy ship, the last three-masted sailing ship used by The Royal Thai Navy, during the reign of King Rama V (1868-1910). The vessel played an important role in transporting teak wood and other goods to be sold in Europe; upon return, carrying coal to Bangkok. It was also one of six ships that protected the Thai capital from invasion in the Franco-Siamese War in 1893. The captain of Sirimahannop during the trading era was Hans Niels Anderson, who was also the founder of the East Asiatic Trading Company. With Sirimahannop having been fully completed, this glorious ship is now permanently docked at the company's historic headquarters in the heart of Bangkok, at Asiatique The Riverfront.
